

McNeely Bulletin

Always remember at McNeely, we care about each other, we care about ourselves and we care about this place.

June is National Indigenous History Month

This has been the start of an important month in terms of recognizing and learning about a previously overlooked part of Canada's history. While we are thinking of our end of school events and routines, the staff have committed to teaching about an important topic- the Indigenous History of Canada. Many of our classes are working together on a project that will respectfully increase awareness of how the Indigenous People in Canada have been treated in the past. Sparked by what occurred at the Tk'emlúps te Secwépemc residential school, our project involves putting the 94 calls to action into student-friendly language.
